Summary of this inspection

Why we carried out this inspection

This was a routine inspection to check that essential standards of quality and safety referred to on the front page were being met. We sometimes describe this as a scheduled inspection.

This was an unannounced inspection.

How we carried out this inspection

We looked at the personal care or treatment records of people who use the service, carried out a visit on 22 August 2013, talked with staff and received feedback from people using comment cards.

What people told us and what we found

We found there were arrangements in place for obtaining and acting in accordance with people's consent to care and treatment. People told us treatment options were discussed with them and their consent was obtained before treatment was carried out. For example one patient told us, "All consent was received before my treatment." Consent to treatment was clearly recorded.

We asked five people for their views about the treatment they received. People said they were treated with courtesy and respect and dental staff were able to put them at their ease. One comment we heard was, "This service is very good. I am always treated with dignity and respect and all staff carry out their duties with the highest availability of care." Discussion with staff and records confirmed good self-care and health promotion advice was offered.

Arrangements were in place to deal with medical emergencies.

The provider had taken reasonable steps to protect people from harm. Staff were trained on how to recognise and report abuse and they were given guidance to follow by the care provider.

The provider ensured staff were safely recruited and regularly checked the quality of their service to ensure continual improvement. This included seeking the views of people using the service. We were told by a patient, "Very friendly staff."

You can see our judgements on the front page of this report.

More information about the provider

Please see our website www.cqc.org.uk for more information, including our most recent judgements against the essential standards. You can contact us using the telephone number on the back of the report if you have additional questions.

There is a glossary at the back of this report which has definitions for words and phrases we use in the report.

Our judgements for each standard inspected

Consent to care and treatment

✓ Met this standard

Before people are given any examination, care, treatment or support, they should be asked if they agree to it

Our judgement

The provider was meeting this standard.

Before people received any care or treatment they were asked for their consent and the provider acted in accordance with their wishes.

Reasons for our judgement

Before people received any care or treatment they were asked for their consent and the provider acted in accordance with their wishes. People told us treatment options were discussed with them. They also told us their consent was obtained before they received treatment. For example one patient told us, "All consent received before my treatment." Another comment was, "Treatments offered were explained to me in a nice professional manner and I understood all options discussed prior to my treatment." We looked at ten examples of patient consent and treatment records. These contained patient signatures to declare their consent to treatment, and treatment records detailed, in summary, discussion about treatment options. We were told should a patient change their mind, a new treatment plan would be generated. This was confirmed by the records we looked at.

The provider had a clear policy on consent. This included guidance regarding children and younger people. We were told everyone who visited the surgery was able to consent to their treatment. If the provider had believed a person was not able to consent to their treatment, we were told they would be referred to the dental hospital where a best interest decision could be considered. The provider was aware of how to access local interpreter services, so dental staff could discuss treatment options with people whose first language was not English. The dentist and dental nurse we spoke with were clear about their responsibilities regarding obtaining patient consent and explained how they used local interpreting services to ensure informed consent was obtained from people for whom English was not a first language. This meant people, irrespective of their first language, were involved in decisions about their care and treatment, and able to offer informed consent.

People should get safe and appropriate care that meets their needs and supports their rights

Our judgement

The provider was meeting this standard.

People experienced care, treatment and support that met their needs and protected their rights.

Reasons for our judgement

People told us they were happy with the treatment they had received. People said they were treated with courtesy and respect and that dental staff were able to put them at their ease. Patients made positive comments about their care and treatment. One comment we heard was, "This service is very good. I am always treated with dignity and respect and all staff carry out their duties with the highest availability of care." Another comment we heard was "At all times I am treated with respect. Staff are aware how I have a fear of dental treatment and make me so at ease, before, during and after treatment."

We saw evidence to show people's needs were assessed and treatment was planned and delivered in line with their individual plan. We looked at several examples of dental records. We saw there was a treatment record and plan which documented what treatment had been provided. We discussed the treatment offered with the Practice Manager. We were told about general health advice given to people during their appointments, which included guidance to patients on the effects of smoking and drinking on their oral health. We saw dentists also screened patients for oral cancers, and referred people to other NHS services for follow-up assessment and treatment if necessary. The recording of these discussions was periodically audited to ensure dental staff regularly offered and documented health promotion advice to patients.

The practice had a process in place for assessing medical risks. People's medical history and the medications they took, were reviewed at each appointment. Allergies, medications or medical conditions the dentist should be aware of were documented. This ensured the dentist had up to date information about people's health needs and meant treatment was planned and delivered in a way that ensured people's safety and welfare.

The practice had an emergency drugs kit and oxygen available. Staff had also been trained in first aid and resuscitation. This meant the practice had appropriate arrangements in place to deal with medical and other foreseeable emergencies.

People should be protected from abuse and staff should respect their human rights

Our judgement

The provider was meeting this standard.

People who used the service were protected from the risk of abuse, because the provider had taken reasonable steps to identify the possibility of abuse and reduce the likelihood of it happening.

Reasons for our judgement

People who used the service were protected from the risk of abuse, because the provider had taken reasonable steps to identify the possibility of abuse and reduce the likelihood of it happening. The provider had a clear policy on recognising and protecting children and adults from abuse. The provider also had guidance for staff on whistle blowing (reporting poor practice). Patients told us they were able to raise concerns they might have with staff.

We reviewed the information we held about the provider and found no reported safeguarding alerts. The practice manager and staff were clear about their role and responsibility to keep people safe and report poor practice. We looked at staff records and saw they had received training in relation to safeguarding vulnerable people and children.

From discussion with the practice manager it was clear they were aware of local arrangements for referring safeguarding adults concerns and clear guidance was available for staff and managers to refer to.

Requirements relating to workers

✓ Met this standard

People should be cared for by staff who are properly qualified and able to do their job

Our judgement

The provider was meeting this standard.

People were cared for by suitably skilled and experienced staff.

Reasons for our judgement

Appropriate checks were undertaken before staff began work. Patients told us they were happy with the staff who worked with them. One person stated, "Very friendly staff."

The provider had a clear recruitment policy in place, and this was supported by a commitment to promoting equality and diversity in employment. We looked at two staff member's recruitment records and saw appropriate pre-employment screening, such as Criminal Records Bureau checks, were carried out. Proof of their identification, up to date clinical registration and proof of professional indemnity were also retained on file. We saw prospective workers were required to provide evidence of their qualifications, experience and work history. This meant effective recruitment and selection processes were carried out before people were employed.

Assessing and monitoring the quality of service provision

✓ Met this standard

The service should have quality checking systems to manage risks and assure the health, welfare and safety of people who receive care

Our judgement

The provider was meeting this standard.

The provider had an effective system to regularly assess and monitor the quality of service that people received.

Reasons for our judgement

People who used the service were asked for their views about their care and treatment and they were acted on. We saw the provider sought the views of patients on the standard of service they received. This included the use of a suggestion box and a patient's questionnaire. The results from these were collated, analysed and an action plan produced to help promote continual improvement. We saw the areas covered at the most recent survey included questions on the building, staff conduct, patient information, appointments and complaints. We saw the ways people could make suggestions, comments and complaints was clearly posted in the waiting room. A patient told us, "I'm always asked that I am ok and settled." Other patients confirmed their views and comments were asked for. This meant patients were able to make their views known and these were acted upon.

We saw evidence the provider was monitoring the quality of service provision with a range of audits. These included an audit of record keeping and infection control arrangements. It was evident actions identified from these audits had been completed, for example with the recording of smoking cessation and oral cancer risk advice. There was evidence that learning from incidents and investigations also took place and appropriate changes were implemented and these arrangements were supported by clear procedures. This meant the provider was assessing and managing risks relating to the health, welfare and safety of people who used the practice. The provider also participated in external quality monitoring and management arrangements. These included accreditation with Investors in People and the British Dental Association's good practice scheme.

About CQC inspections

We are the regulator of health and social care in England.

All providers of regulated health and social care services have a legal responsibility to make sure they are meeting essential standards of quality and safety. These are the standards everyone should be able to expect when they receive care.

The essential standards are described in the Health and Social Care Act 2008 (Regulated Activities) Regulations 2010 and the Care Quality Commission (Registration) Regulations 2009. We regulate against these standards, which we sometimes describe as "government standards".

We carry out unannounced inspections of all care homes, acute hospitals and domiciliary care services in England at least once a year to judge whether or not the essential standards are being met. We carry out inspections of other services less often. All of our inspections are unannounced unless there is a good reason to let the provider know we are coming.

There are 16 essential standards that relate most directly to the quality and safety of care and these are grouped into five key areas. When we inspect we could check all or part of any of the 16 standards at any time depending on the individual circumstances of the service. Because of this we often check different standards at different times.

When we inspect, we always visit and we do things like observe how people are cared for, and we talk to people who use the service, to their carers and to staff. We also review information we have gathered about the provider, check the service's records and check whether the right systems and processes are in place.

We focus on whether or not the provider is meeting the standards and we are guided by whether people are experiencing the outcomes they should be able to expect when the standards are being met. By outcomes we mean the impact care has on the health, safety and welfare of people who use the service, and the experience they have whilst receiving it.

Our inspectors judge if any action is required by the provider of the service to improve the standard of care being provided. Where providers are non-compliant with the regulations, we take enforcement action against them. If we require a service to take action, or if we take enforcement action, we re-inspect it before its next routine inspection was due. This could mean we re-inspect a service several times in one year. We also might decide to re-inspect a service if new concerns emerge about it before the next routine inspection.

In between inspections we continually monitor information we have about providers. The information comes from the public, the provider, other organisations, and from care workers.

You can tell us about your experience of this provider on our website.

How we define our judgements

The following pages show our findings and regulatory judgement for each essential standard or part of the standard that we inspected. Our judgements are based on the ongoing review and analysis of the information gathered by CQC about this provider and the evidence collected during this inspection.

We reach one of the following judgements for each essential standard inspected.

✓ Met this standard This means that the standard was being met in that the provider was compliant with the regulation. If we find that standards were met, we take no regulatory action but we may make comments that may be useful to the provider and to the public about minor improvements that could be made.

✗ Action needed This means that the standard was not being met in that the provider was non-compliant with the regulation. We may have set a compliance action requiring the provider to produce a report setting out how and by when changes will be made to make sure they comply with the standard. We monitor the implementation of action plans in these reports and, if necessary, take further action. We may have identified a breach of a regulation which is more serious, and we will make sure action is taken. We will report on this when it is complete.

✗ Enforcement action taken If the breach of the regulation was more serious, or there have been several or continual breaches, we have a range of actions we take using the criminal and/or civil procedures in the Health and Social Care Act 2008 and relevant regulations. These enforcement powers include issuing a warning notice; restricting or suspending the services a provider can offer, or the number of people it can care for; issuing fines and formal cautions; in extreme cases, cancelling a provider or managers registration or prosecuting a manager or provider. These enforcement powers are set out in law and mean that we can take swift, targeted action where services are failing people.

Where we find non-compliance with a regulation (or part of a regulation), we state which part of the regulation has been breached. Only where there is non compliance with one or more of Regulations 9-24 of the Regulated Activity Regulations, will our report include a judgement about the level of impact on people who use the service (and others, if appropriate to the regulation). This could be a minor, moderate or major impact.

Minor impact - people who use the service experienced poor care that had an impact on their health, safety or welfare or there was a risk of this happening. The impact was not significant and the matter could be managed or resolved quickly.

Moderate impact - people who use the service experienced poor care that had a significant effect on their health, safety or welfare or there was a risk of this happening. The matter may need to be resolved quickly.

Major impact - people who use the service experienced poor care that had a serious current or long term impact on their health, safety and welfare, or there was a risk of this happening. The matter needs to be resolved quickly

We decide the most appropriate action to take to ensure that the necessary changes are made. We always follow up to check whether action has been taken to meet the standards.

Glossary of terms we use in this report

Essential standard

The essential standards of quality and safety are described in our Guidance about compliance: Essential standards of quality and safety. They consist of a significant number of the Health and Social Care Act 2008 (Regulated Activities) Regulations 2010 and the Care Quality Commission (Registration) Regulations 2009. These regulations describe the essential standards of quality and safety that people who use health and adult social care services have a right to expect. A full list of the standards can be found within the Guidance about compliance. The 16 essential standards are:

Respecting and involving people who use services - Outcome 1 (Regulation 17)

Consent to care and treatment - Outcome 2 (Regulation 18)

Care and welfare of people who use services - Outcome 4 (Regulation 9)

Meeting Nutritional Needs - Outcome 5 (Regulation 14)

Cooperating with other providers - Outcome 6 (Regulation 24)

Safeguarding people who use services from abuse - Outcome 7 (Regulation 11)

Cleanliness and infection control - Outcome 8 (Regulation 12)

Management of medicines - Outcome 9 (Regulation 13)

Safety and suitability of premises - Outcome 10 (Regulation 15)

Safety, availability and suitability of equipment - Outcome 11 (Regulation 16)

Requirements relating to workers - Outcome 12 (Regulation 21)

Staffing - Outcome 13 (Regulation 22)

Supporting Staff - Outcome 14 (Regulation 23)

Assessing and monitoring the quality of service provision - Outcome 16 (Regulation 10)

Complaints - Outcome 17 (Regulation 19)

Records - Outcome 21 (Regulation 20)

Regulated activity

These are prescribed activities related to care and treatment that require registration with CQC. These are set out in legislation, and reflect the services provided.

(Registered) Provider

There are several legal terms relating to the providers of services. These include registered person, service provider and registered manager. The term 'provider' means anyone with a legal responsibility for ensuring that the requirements of the law are carried out. On our website we often refer to providers as a 'service'.

Regulations

We regulate against the Health and Social Care Act 2008 (Regulated Activities) Regulations 2010 and the Care Quality Commission (Registration) Regulations 2009.

Responsive inspection

This is carried out at any time in relation to identified concerns.

Routine inspection

This is planned and could occur at any time. We sometimes describe this as a scheduled inspection.

Themed inspection

This is targeted to look at specific standards, sectors or types of care.
